THE TREASURY REPORT. Imperious things Which Secretar

Washington special to the Philadelphia Traces says: The annual re-port of the Secretary of the Treasury, which is made directly to Congress, is practically completed. As a narrative of the fiscal operations of the Govern-ment, this report, always, possesses ment, this report always possesses greater importance than that of any of the other departments, and, in fact, more than the average annual message of the President, which, as a rule, is nothing more than a parade of platitudes on State questions and public economy. The report of Secretary Manning, however, will have added importance, not only as a reflex of the fit ancial policy of the administration of a party holding doctrines on many pub-lic questions almost the opposite of the ninistrations of the past twenty-four years, but as treating directly upon two of the leading questions of the hour, silver and the tariff. The position of the Secretary on the tariff has already been given in the Times. Since then he has had an opportunity to compare his views with the views of persons representing the different industries. In reply to the circular of tariff inquiry sent out during the past summer, the Secretary has received fully 300 communications—some urging against the sgitation of the tariff at all, and making no reply to the list of questions propounded in search of information, others answering categorically, and still others hypothetically.

The replies are not quite as fall and numerous as the Secretary desired. At first there was some suspicion of the ultimate uses to which the information would be applied. It was hinted in certain quarters that Edward Atkinson, a member of the Cobden Club, of England, and one of the mana-gers of the pro-British industrial movement in the United States, was the originator of the list of questions sanc-tioned by the Secretary for the purpose of getting at the bottom figures, with a view to a reduction of duties to a revenue basis and, in some cases, incidental protection. This idea, however, was in part exploded by the disclaimers of the Secretary himself and other protec-tion Democrats. It was next said that the data would be held in confidence. but as that was an impossibility this did not have the desired effect.

THE AD VALOREM SYSTEM.

The bulk of the replies are from importers, and are chiefly directed against change from ad valorem to specific luties. There are no less than 18,000 cases of undervaluation in the Treasury Department. As this fraud upon the American people and the revenues of the Government by foreigners is due to the ad raiorem system, the importers are naturally urgent for the retention of the ad calorem method of assessing duties. In reference to the importing business, it is said at the Treasury Department that the rascalities of foreign manufacturers and their relatives representing them in the importer and be honest. The manufacture of articles in foreign countries for the American markets is a special branch of industry, and therefore the the consulate of shipment and custom-industries of Pennsylvania the replies are not as full as was expected. The western iron associations are opposed to a reopening of the question of the tariff, and, therefore, practically decline to respond to the questions submitted. They do this, however, in great courtesy to the Secretary, and appreciating his friendly motives. These associations take the ground that the question of meeting the Free Traders in Congress had better be considered when the emergency arises. The report of the American Iron and Steel Association had not been received at all yesterday, although the department was given to understand that it would freely contribute all the desired information. At the Treasury Department there apmonious on some very important points, ernment Chemist. These relate to free ore, and in certain details as to the relations of iron and steel. It is hinted that there is a strong influence in favor of free raw materials, as matters of principle. The Eastern Pig-Iron Association has submitted a report covering the en-tire ground laid down by the questions of the Secretary of the Treasury. The report is very satisfactory and contains the most comprehensive review of the the most comprehensive review of the All the baking-powders of the marpig-iron industry which has been sub-

THE REPLIES TO BE SENT TO CON-GRESS.

As an afterthought the Secretary of the Treasury has asked permission of all the associations and others to put their replies in type for transmission to Congress. The Secretary claims that such a course is in the interest of the American manufacturers, as it will give them an opportunity to present their side of the question to Congress in and constitution of the Committee on Ways and Means.

to ine use the Secretary will make of these replies beyond their transmission to Congress. It can be said that his recommendations to Congress on the tariff question will be confined entirely to the administration of the law, chiefly to prevent the barefaced false appraisets and under-valuations of foreign goods, by giving the Government the power to prosecute and punish this class of offenders.

He will make no recommendations as to rates of duties, but will suggest as a general principle the benefit which would result from an increase of the number of articles subject to specific general principle the benefit which would result from an increase of the number of articles subject to specific fast horse called Pritz. Intimations were thrown out by his political opponents during the campaign that the horse was a present, and the editor of the Virginian asked Mr. Riddleberger in the columns of his paper how he got the horse. Riddleberger replied that Mr. McCarrick, of Norfolk, could be applied to for information, and that gentleman, in answer to a note from Mr. Martin, said Senator Riddleberger had bought the horse of him, and had paid him $500 for it. Mr. Martin published this in his paper, premising it with the statement that be had written to McCarrick at Riddleberger's "request." On this whipped it might permanently affect ment: "The word 'request' is a lie. The suggestions which came first were lies, and could not have originated with a gentleman. Riddleberger does not respend to impertinent inquiries from ir-responsible creatures, who have no regard for truth or even decency."

Mr. Martin thereupon demanded the name of the author of the article, and

Mr. Riddleberger promptly responded, avowing the authorship. Mr. Martin followed with a note asking Riddleberger "to indicate some one with whom I can confer, as is usual in such cases." Riddleberger responded: more personal difficulties in that man- tent whatever, and if she make any unprovoked personal attacks upon any one, and that he only used personalities in reply to unjustifiable "If you will suspend Miss Turner

The breaking up of the numerous petty courts of the kinglets of Germany, and of the princelings and grand dukes of Italy, has been a great loss to the English abroad. The English debelligerent character between Senator Riddleberger, who is the editor of the Ehenandoak Herald, published at Woodstock, Va., and Mr. Martin, the editor of the Virginian, published at the same place, and which correspondence grew out of the amenities of the campaign recently ended, has reached here. no 20-3t General Passenger Agent.

STREETS, ADJOINING THE WOOD & COWARDIN FLATS, AT AUCTION.—On WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1885, at 4 o'clock P. M., on the premises, we will offer the very valuable and destrable PRO-PERTY located as above. The house is one of the most substantial and comfortable residences now on the market. It was built of the very best materials, and is now in good order. There are twenty-two rooms in the house, thirteen of which have fire-places and marble mantels. There are numerous closets, panyries, &c., and all the modern improvements, two back porches the width of the house, stock-brick stable and carriage-house, and spacious coalvants. The main house occupies 30x45 feet, and the whole lot fronts 50x160 feet to a wide alley in common.

This property is admirably located for a physician or professional gentleman, as it is so near to the business part of the city and at the same time in a very reduced and select neighborhood.

Trems: About one half of the purchasemoney can be retained on mortgage for a number of years at 6 per cent. Interest.

Parties destring to see the house will please call on the auctioneers. 7:40 A. M. Throughand Local Mall except Sunday, Connects for Lynchburg.
